THE PARNELL COMMISSION.

Desperate Attempt to Prove That Ireland's Champion is

AN ALLY OF POLITICAL MURDERERS

A Cold Stab at Ressa and His Claims as

before the Parnell Commission yesterday was of a sensational character. He revealed his connection with the various secret organizations in the United States which were working for Ireland's freedom. He spoke of the work of the Boston Convention, and of a secret meeting held in Pittsburg. The Attorney General sought to prove by the witness that while Parnell and his colleagues may have had no connection with the Fenian outrages, yet they chose the perpetrators, knowing their character, as allies.

LONDON, February 7 .- Upon the resumption of the sitting of the Parnell Commission to-day the witness Beach made a correction in the testimony he gave vesterday. He said it was Boyton whom he saw at the Philadelphia Convention in 1883, and not Sheridars as he testified yesterday. The latter only arrived in America in 1884. Attorney General Webster read a portion of the Constitution of the "U. S." Beach explained the symbols standing for secretary and treasurer, the secretary's being a double square, with one right-angle placed over the other, while the treasurer's was a cross. In March, 1884, witness attended a district convention of the "U.S.," where he saw Sullivan and Lomassey.

Attorney General Webster asked the witness what services Lomussey had rendered that the brotherhood should support his family.

Witness explained that a convention of the reunited sections, now known as the "U. B.," was held in June, 1888, when a delegate from Detroit, where the widow of Lomassey lived, introduced the subject.

OBJECTED TO THE EVIDENCE. Sir Charles Russell asked the Court whether this was evidence against the Par-

Attorney General Webster held that these organizations were really all one, and that the evidence was admissible because Ecan. Sheridan and others were directly connected with the L. R. B. and the L. U. B.

Sir Henry James also contended that the witness' alleged conversation with Parnell made his evidence admissible. Parnell had requested the witness to do certain things when he arrived in America, and it had been proved that the request was carried out. Therefore the first step was to demonstrate the nature of the society with which it was alleged arnell desired an alliance. What was about to be proved was the acts of the association with which Parnell desired to come into line. Having but Parnell's view before the court, and supposing they showed that money was pro-cured for dynamite, and proved that dynamite received sympathy from this body by being recompensed, that would be one act which, if brought home to the knowledge of individuals, would permit of no question being raised. They would prove these acts, and the notorious character of the body with which an alliance was sought was shown by its acts and the one was sought was shown by its acts, and the one desired to prove at present was relevant #### and percinent. UNTIL THE END OF TIME.

Sir Charles Russell said that the Attorney General's theory made Parnell and his asso ciates affected by the actions of the U.B. or the B. C. to the end of time.

Mr. Reid said that the Attorney General, before proving proceedings in America against the Parnellites, should produce more definite evidence of the arrangement and conduct of the conspiracy, and in a spirit other than that in which the evidence had so far been tendered. It was not sufficient to show conversations, innocent in themselves, without proving guilty knowledge of such object as was contemplated.
Attorney General Webster said he had never

Attorney General Webster said he had never been prepared to suggest that Mr. Parnell or other members of Parliament were personally connected with murderous outrages. His contention was that they were allied with people whom they knew to be, or could have known, if they had made proper inquiries, to have been prominently connected many years with such outrages. The Attorney General read the evidence given yesterday, and asked why he was not allowed to introduce similar evidence to allowed to introduce similar evidence to to show what the U. B. was doing in 884, although not by direct mandate or specific astructions. He did not contend that Mr. 'arnell and his associates planned murder but that they allied themselves intimately with the I. R. B., and availed themselves of its money. Anowing the character of the I. R. B. they continued their alliance with it after most distinct and positive notice.

VERY HARMONIOUS.

It had been proved that several members of the House of Commons attended four or five League Conventions in America where the L mony between them was referred to in a document read at the convention, in which the hope was expressed that the tree which Davitt had planted in Mayo, might grow until it had grown into an organization that would effect Ireland's

The Court decided to admit the evidence on the ground that the U. B. and the Cian-checks. Styles particularly adapted for na-Gael and the I. R. B. were practically the same body and united, the members of one the same body and united, the members of one being interchangeable upon the others. It had been proved that certain persons, including Egan, Brepuan and Sheridan among the persons charged, were members of the I. R. B. Evidence, not of one member's conversation with another, but as to what was done in the convention of the U. B., would be evidence against them. Other persons, especially the members of Parliament whom Sir Charles Russell presented, stood in a different position, and the Court would abstain from saying any thing regarding the applicability of this evidence against them, but the evidence was admissible.

Beach then continued his testimony. He said that Luke Dillon, Egan, Devoy, Samuel Morris and D. O'Mahon Connor attended the convention, which unanimously ordered the executive to protect Lomassey's family.

Attorney-General Webster said be only wished to complete the reference to Lomassey by proving the adoption of this resolution.

THE BOSTON CONVENTION. leach, continuing, said that he accompanied Egan and other delegates to the Boston Con-vention, which was held in August, 1884. Egan explained his escape and told how he received information from Dublin Castle regarding the intended movements of the authorities. He knew of the order of arrest for him 20 minutes after it was issued, and immediately returned home, packed his satchel and destroyed all the documents in his possession concerning the L. R. B. and Carey's letters. A Scotch friend took his satchel and rug to the railway station and bought a ticket for him to Belfast. Egan rded the train a minute before it started, passed the night in a Belfast hotel and in morning took a ticket for Leeds. He left train at Manchester, proceeded to Hull trook a transport for Between the control of the party the morning took a ticket for Leeds. He left the train at Manchester, proceeded to Hull and took a steamer for Rotterdam. Beach further said that Egan had told him that Brennan got the first news of his (Bren-man's) being implicated by a newspaper placard referring to Carey's evidence against him. Brennan was walking in the Strand with Lord Mayor Sexton at the time. They crossed the street, toraed into a side alley and separated. Brennan went home and packed his valise. Sexton bought a ticket for Calais, and went with it from Charing Cross to London bridge, where he met Brennan, to whom he transferred the ticket. The same night Breanan landed at Calais.

Egan also told the witness that John Walsh and Dennis McCarthy were sent to Australia to assist Fenian prisoners there to escape. He also mentioned Ryan, Matt Harris, Boyton, Sheridan, Nicholas Tie and James O'Connor, and bitterly denounced Samuel Anderson, the Government prosecuting official. Egan also said that if Gallagher had been free for 48 hours longer some of the best buildings in London would have been blown up.

A STRUGGLE FOR OFFICE. Sir Charles Russell here quoted from a letter written by Beach, in which the latter referred to the difficulty any one in a large organization encountered in being appointed to office. Beach said he was elected chairman of the Illinois delegates before he wrote the letter. Another organization, a seceding faction, then existed. According to the Irish motto, "If you are not for you are forninst me," it was imare not for you are forninst me," it was impossible to belong to both organizations. Witness wrote the letter desiring to explain that he was unable to carry water on both shoulders. Betts was president of the preliminary secret meeting of the Boston convention of 1884, where witness met Tynan with Devoy, John Boyle O'Reilly, Dermond and Walsh. Witness knew Tynan as Number One. He identified a photograph of Tynan. Tynan was not present at the secret meetings, but he attended the open meetings. He did not take a prominent part. Sexton, J. Redmond and Mrs. Parnell attended the convention.

Attorney General Webster quoted Sexton's speech to show that he knew Alexander Sulli

Beach said he knew that Egan was a member of the U. B. in 1882, and believed that he had since continued to be a member. He did not know whether Egan joined the I. R. B. after his expulsion in 1889. Tim Moroney, Gorman, Flatley and Poland were members of the U. B. Eight of the 13 principal officers of the American League were members of the U. B. Witness identified a report, dated September 24, 1881, congratulating the members upon the increased strength of the organization and upon having connected all the broken links in the open convention with the secret power which originated and controlled all their actions. The Executive, the report said, intended to plant the seeds in every land. Strict silence concerning the work was enjoined upon the members. Beach said he knew that Egan was a membe

Beach produced a copy of a circular signed by Egan, and dated January, 1885, forbidding one camp sending a circular to another. The circular said that all communications must be made through headquarters. The Irish-American League issued a document on June 17, 1885, urging the members of the "U. S." to subscribe to the Parliamentary fund. It declared that to the Parliamentary fund. It declared that Mr. Parnell had defeated a strong British Government and banished Earl Spencer and his brutal, loathesome minions. A circular issued on July 25 expressed disappointment at the small amount of funds received and urged renewed exertion. A circular issued in November, 1885, asked that funds be transmitted to Dr. O'Reilly, and announced that a convention would be held at Chicago in 1886 which Mr. Parnell would attend. It warned members not to talk of "U. S." matters outside, and said that babblers would be expelled.

Witness said he visited the Southern States in November, 1885, with a letter from Egan, de-scribing him as a most devoted friend of the Irish Nationalists. This testimony was greeted with laughter, in which the witness heartily joined.

In one circular, witness said, mention was made of the expulsion of Dr. Cronan for treason to Ireland, and the violation of his oath of obligation. Beach was on the committee that At this point Mr. Parnell entered. He took a seat by the side of Mr. Davitt, with whom he conversed for some time.

DYNAMITE DELUSION.

"Egan," the witness continued, "presided at League meetings in 1884 and 1885. A circular issued in March, 1886, referred to the 'emasculated and unacceptable home rule scheme,' and urged the camps to remit funds for 'delusion,' the cipher word for dynamite."

Beach described the Chicago convention of August, 1880. He said that Messrs. O'Brien, Redmond and Deasy were present at a secret meeting held in Pittsburg before the conven-tion, at which the Irish National Brotherhood was formed. Witness went to England in 1887, and met Mr. Fox, a member of Parliament. At the joint convention of the I. N. B. and I. U. B. held in Chicago in June, 1888, it was urged that measures be taken for the release of Gallacharand ethological production. lagher and other prisoners in England.
Patrick Farrell, of Pottsville, and John M. Patrick Farrell, of Pottsville, and John M. Armstrong, members of the convention, went to England in June, 1885. The organization was better on paper than in reality. Many of the members did not pay their dues.

Sir Charles Russell then began the cross-examination of the witness. Beach said he went to America in 1861. He had previously been in France and was a drawer's assistant in Louise.

France, and was a draper's assistant in London and Colchester. After his arrival in America and Colchester. After his arrival in America he joined the army. He became a Fenian in 1855, while still in the army. His object was to obtain all the information possible. He swore to fight for Ireland's independence, and took the Fenian military oath of allegiance. He did not intend to keep the oath. He never forgot that he was an English subject and British born. Knowing that a conspiracy existed, he wrote about it to his father, who on his own volition informed the Member of Parliament for Colchester, who advised him to inform the Home Office. From 1815 witness tried his best to obtain the confidence of those commetted with the organization, for the purpose of betraying it to every extent he could. "I never had the slightest sympathy with the movement," he said.

In reply to further questions Beach said: "All my communications were made to my father up to 1868. I was once Adjutant General of the Fenian Military Brotherhood, and attended a council of war. I consider myself a military spy in my country's service. From 1868.
